Christine Susanna Tjhin is the Co-Founder and Director of Strategic Communication and Research at Gentala Institute.

Established in 2020 to support the distribution of vaccines and medical equipment between Indonesia and China, Gentala Institute has since evolved into a business consultancy and policy research institute that promotes sustainable, smart, and socially responsible partnerships.

Gentala Institute was founded by Indonesian professionals who studied at leading Chinese universities and have established diverse, deep, and durable ties to China. As such, Gentala Institute serves as a trusted bridge for businesses, governments, academia, and communities in both nations.

Beyond Gentala Institute, Christine serves as an advisor on China affairs to the Deputy for Geopolitics at the Indonesian National Defense Council (DPN); a member of the Supervisory Body of the Indonesia Council of Sinologists (World Sinology Center); a Senior Expert in the China Policy Group at the Foreign Policy Community Indonesia (FPCI); the Coordinator for China observer networks, which regularly consult with the Indonesian Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

She commenced her think tank career in 2002 at the Indonesian Pluralism Institute (IPI) and in 2003 at the Centre for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS), Indonesia. As a proactive contributor to policy discourse, Christine routinely provides counsel to governmental bodies, diplomatic missions, NGOs, and businesses. Her analyses and commentaries are regularly featured in both domestic and international media.

She studied Economics, Strategic Management, East Asian Studies, and International Relations at the following institutions: Peking University, Beihang University, Fujian Normal University, the Australian National University, and Universitas Tarumanagara.
